We were able to meet with our IT staff. It turns out in terms of project management, this is coming to them at a very bad time. They answered a lot of our questions but also gave us information on what needs to happen before they can pull the file. The advancement services staff person in our office and I have specific questions about how the data is handled per the attachments we received that we need to ask PCI. When would be a good time to go over those questions?

We have had key people out of the office and haven't been able to coordinate a meeting now that they are back. We aren't able to discuss this with the key players until next week, so we are definitely not in the 6/7 timeframe.
